Students will have three options when classes resume this fall in Pasco Schools.

Pasco Schools Superintendent Kurt Browning announced his ReOpening Pasco Schools plan in a news release issued June 18.

"Parents sent us a message loud and clear: they wanted options," Browning said, in the news release. "Many are eager to have their student return to school and see their teachers and classmates. But, many aren't ready for that yet. There's an option here for masks or cloth face coverings on the school everyone."

Here are the choices outlined in the district's 2020-2021 reopening plan:

- Traditional - A return to a classroom with the standard schedule and bell times.

This option includes a heavy emphasis on health and safety precautions: will practice safe social distancing to the greatest extent possible. Schools will encourage the gathering of large groups of students. Students will be expected
